Devanadera: There's still impediment

By Norman Bordadora and Edson C. Tandoc Jr.

ACTING JUSTICE SECRETARY Agnes Devanadera sees a legal obstacle to returning to the dictator's widow, Imelda Marcos, pieces of jewelry that the Aquino administration seized shortly after the downfall of the Marcos dictatorship.

Chief Presidential Legal Counsel Raul Gonzalez, who formally turned over the reins of the Department of Justice to Devanadera yesterday, ordered on June 4 the Presidential Commission on Good Government to return the jewelry "if the PCGG finds no legal impediment."

Formed in 1986 right after Corazon Aquino was sworn in as President, the PCGG is tasked with recovering ill-gotten wealth of the Marcoses estimated then to be in billions of dollars.

THE JEWELRY COLLECTION OF Imelda Marcos consists of tiaras, necklaces, watches, earrings, bracelets of rubies, emeralds, jade, gold pieces, diamonds and pearls made by Gucci, Van Cleef and Arpels, Bulgari and Philippe Patek, among other jewelers.

The Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG) has classified the collection into three—Malacañang, Honolulu and Roumeliotes.

The Malacañang collection, composed of some 300 pieces, was left behind by the Marcos family in the Palace when they fled the country on Feb. 25, 1986.

Filipinos join hands vs swine flu

By Jeannette I. Andrade and Inquirer Bureaus

CHURCHMEN ANNOUNCED THE holding of religious processions and special Masses, students trooped back to schools with bottles of alcohol in their bags and guards in some colleges carried thermometers to check temperatures, as Filipinos joined hands in a battle against the swine flu virus.

As some 5 million youths poured back into public and private schools with the end of summer, student marshals in charge of taking temperatures in a Lucena City school made sure no one got in without an "OK" stamped on the wrist.

Soldiers in military camps joined in the fight by shunning handshakes and limiting their greetings to mere salutes.

BACOLOD CITY—SEN. MAR ROXAS' hugely popular television ad "padyak" that was credited with raising his ratings in surveys on presidential hopefuls was inspired by the boy who drove a "trisikad."

Roxas heard the story of Wilfredo "Eding" Manang at the graduation ceremonies on March 26 at Carlos Hilado Memorial State College (CHMSC) in Talisay City, Negros Occidental, where he was the keynote speaker.

Public warned as flu cases near 200 mark

By Dona Pazzibugan, Christian V. Esguerra and Inquirer Central Luzon

HEALTH AUTHORITIES YESTERDAY warned the public against underestimating the potential for mutation of the highly contagious swine flu virus, as the disease struck a second provincial school.

The nationwide total of those stricken with Influenza A(H1N1) neared the 200 mark after the swine flu virus downed 46 more people over the weekend, including eight students of Doña Candelaria Duque Meneses National High School in Bulakan, Bulacan.

"Don't underestimate the virus' potential for mutation," Health Secretary Francisco Duque III said in a media briefing. "We really don't know what is going to happen in the future, if it will mutate."

Duque said the new cases brought to 193 the total number of people afflicted with the virus. He said the good news was that all of the confirmed cases involved a "mild" strain of the virus.

House dangles federalism issue to draw senators to attend Con-ass

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr. and Christine O. Avendaño

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES is planning to use the federalism bill of Sen. Aquilino Pimentel Jr. to induce senators to attend the constituent assembly (Con-ass) it hopes to convene shortly after President Macapagal-Arroyo's State of the Nation Address on July 27.

"Why don't we meet together just to discuss this (federalism), because it's their proposal anyway. If they (senators) will not attend, it will show that they are not serious about it," Speaker Prospero Nograles said in a press conference.

Nograles said Pimentel's bill, which seeks to create 11 states with Metro Manila as the seat of power under a federal presidential bicameral form of government, had the support of 13 senators.

The measure was filed in 2008 well ahead of House Resolution No. 1109 (which proposes to convene a Con-ass with Congress voting jointly and not separately) and House Resolution No. 737 (which proposes to lift restrictions on foreign investments).

"We can convene a Con-ass and put Nene Pimentel's federalism bill and my resolution on investment restrictions as the only agenda we will tackle," Nograles said.

The House could also send an invitation to senators who had already indicated they would not attend, Nograles [illegible]

RP urged to join alliance to reduce carbon emissions

By DJ Yap

THE PHILIPPINES SHOULD ALLY ITSELF with other developing nations in pushing a proposal to reduce rich countries' carbon emissions by 40 percent in eight years, an international think tank said yesterday.

Annalie Hill, senior policy adviser at Oxfam, a nongovernment organization devoted to ending worldwide poverty, said an alliance of developing nations would be more effective in pressuring developed countries to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

She noted that the Philippines had yet to join the alliance of South Africa, Brazil, China and India, which are demanding a commitment from the rich countries to reduce their carbon emissions by more than 40 percent.

At a briefing in Mandaluyong City, Hill said that on its own, the Philippines stood to gain little from the negotiations on climate change since it belonged to the "middle" tier of developing nations.

"It is not high enough in the scene politically in terms of geopolitical influence but it is not low enough to benefit from the negotiations," he said.

Hill added that a "very solid alliance" among developing nations should be established to increase support for the 40-percent proposal.

She said there was a "really worrying dynamic" in the current negotiations among countries, as rich states like Belgium and the United States have been pushing developing countries to reduce their emissions.

He said developing nations were "least responsible" for the current global warming trends, contributing only three percent of global emissions, yet they remain the most vulnerable to its impact.

"That is the inequality of global warming," Hill told reporters.

Maria Athena Ballesteros, senior associate at the World Resources Institute, said in the same forum that development institutions, such as the Asian Development Bank, must do more to integrate climate change into their programs.

The ADB plays host to the Asia Clean Energy Forum this week, which will be attended by more than 700 participants from various NGOs and will highlight how practices in policy and finance that respond to Asia's climate, access and energy-security challenges.

  - ubo
  - sakit ng ulo
  - pananakit ng lalamunan

-ugaliing maghugas ng kamay gamit ang sabon at tubig
-iwasan ang pagyakap, paghalik, at pagkamay sa tao
-iwasan ang paghawak sa mata, ilong at bibig ng hindi naghugas ng kamay
-iwasang lumapit sa mga taong maysakit
-palakasin ang resistensya ng katawan

Ibang Miyembro ng Pamilya

-kung posible, panatilihin sa isang kwarto ang miyembro ng pamilya na may sakit
-ugaliing maghugas ng kamay pagkatapos alagaan ang pasyente
-hugasang mabuti ang pinagkainan ng pasyente
